

Bardsley Construction Ltd

Commercial and contractual awareness training programme for non-commercial project delivery staff

The Client

Bardsley is a well established, expanding contractor based in the North of England that carries out all types of building contracts up to approximately £20 million, predominantly under JCT and NEC forms of contract.

The Requirement

As a consequence of the business expansion, Bardsley identified the need for commercial and contractual awareness training for project operational and delivery staff to provide them with the tools and knowledge to administer their contracts effectively and to minimise risks.

The Solution

Systech International was commissioned to develop a bespoke training programme for which the key learning objective was to highlight where and how delivery teams influence project risks and opportunities. We worked with the directors to establish the topics to be covered and to understand the Bardsley processes and procedures that needed to be incorporated within the training materials. A training programme that included practical examples and workshops, was developed comprising six half day seminars over a period of six months.

Programme content

- Subcontract procurement & management
- Main contracts - key things you need to know
- Change management
- Record keeping
- Cash management
- Planning & programming

Attendee feedback...

- "Very well presented from someone who has an in depth understanding of what happens, practically on site, as well as what should happen"
- "Great course, very informative"
